Dear CHS Class of 2015,

This has been an amazing school year. Each of you has worked diligently with your teachers and fellow students to achieve academic and personal success. There have been some great moments from this past year, including many of our Debate team victories and our Boys' basketball team getting into the state tournament. The CHS Class of 2015 is terrific!

Your future is bright. You have completed high school, the first part of a long journey. Next year and in the years to come you will achieve even greater triumphs. You will go on to and graduate college, enter meaningful careers, travel, see your siblings grow up, and eventually start families of your own. So much possibility awaits you. But as you look to the future, remember this.

You must work not only to create better lives for yourselves. You must also work to create stronger communities and a better world. This year in America we have seen ongoing struggles with problems that can seem intractable. With the deaths of Michael Brown in Ferguson and Eric Garner in New York, we are painfully reminded of the grave injustices and inequalities we face. Therefore, you, CHS Class of 2015, as the leaders and creative thinkers of the next generation, must work together.

You must take what you have learned in school and in your lives, and use this knowledge to pursue positive change. It is your responsibility to build toward a socially just world where everyone can achieve their highest aspirations. There is no denying the challenges ahead of you. Yet there is also no denying the promise, the opportunity, and the great possibility that the future holds. Each of you now has the power and the knowledge to pursue this better world for yourselves, for each other, and for all of us.

I'm sorry I think you are confusing Registered Nurses with babysitters...

Quit being annoying or I'll have you sedated, intubated, and restrained within 5 minutes. Love, your nurse.

I see you've scratched your pinky toe....It's a good thing you've come to the ER for that. If you could just push that stroke victim out of your way we will operate ASAP

Treat your nurse well. I can walk as slow or as fast as I choose to retrieve that pain medication you requested.

The background of the entire page is an abstract geometric pattern. It consists of a grid of squares, some of which are filled with color while others are left white. The colors used are various shades of red (from deep maroon to bright pink), blue (from light sky blue to deep navy), and a muted teal. The squares are arranged in a non-uniform, scattered pattern across the page, creating a modern, pixelated aesthetic.

History of Charlestown's Flags

Controversy exists over some of the flags used by the Charlestown Militia. The red flag with the white canton and green tree is said to be the Provincial Flag without the cross in the upper left corner. This is said to have been removed as an act of rebellion against England - something which greatly annoyed the King's representatives in the Colony. This is the flag seen in the famous painting by Trumbell called "The Battle of Bunker Hill".

The blue flag is said by some to have been a mistake in coloring which occurred perhaps as long as two hundred years ago. Nonetheless, the flag has - over time - become synonymous with Bunker Hill and is now seen prominently displayed at the Bunker Hill Monument and by Charlestown area merchants.

Finally we show the Grand Union Flag which was raised by George Washington at Cambridge Massachusetts on the 1st of January, 1776. Colonel Thomas Gardner died of wounds received at the Battle of Bunker Hill and would, of course, never have seen this flag. His troops however, serving under General Nathanael Greene would certainly have been familiar with this "First Flag".
